HOPI TUTUVENI
Volume 25, Number 14                                                               TUESDAY, July 18, 2017

On July 6, 2017, Hopi Veterans Services, in partnership with the American Legion Auxiliary (ADVS), launched the inaugural Veterans Benefits session using web camera technology. This allows veterans and widows to meet in “real time” with a certified veterans service officer (VSO) to assist with VA Administration compensation and pension claims. This new approach will enable local veterans residing on or near the Hopi Reservation to come to the Hopi Veterans Services office in Kykotsmovi, AZ, to apply for VA benefits by using a VSO and a web camera. The Hopi Tribe is the first to use this new IT method for their veterans.

“This is an innovative way to better serve our veterans. If we can do something to make it easier to access benefits, it means we’re doing our job well,” Wanda Wright, ADVS, Director, says.

Before this program, Hopi veterans had to travel to a veterans benefits office in Prescott or Flagstaff; or veteran benefit counselors had to meet veterans at a temporary office. This way, no one has to travel.

“Our veteran benefit counselors in the Northern Region came up with the idea. Since we use web camera internally, they questioned if we could use it for our customers. They ran a successful pilot from the Flagstaff ADVS office, and now they’ve built up about 70 successful meetings,” Wright adds. “We have a number of elderly veterans in Arizona. Forty percent of our veterans are over 65. To have them travel two hours to visit a VA office just doesn’t make sense.”

David Moses, ADVS Northern Region Manager, was instrumental in working with VHS to make this a reality.

“The web based program called ‘Go To Meeting’ was provided to the agency to conduct internal meetings. The Northern Region realized its potential to reach out to the most rural areas of Northern Arizona. Now after successful online appointments with veterans through the Window Arizona Indian Health Services, the Hopi Veterans Services and our Flagstaff office, we are ready to promote Web VBC to all areas of Northern Arizona,” Moses says.

The first two sessions were a learning curve for both ADVS and Hopi, but the glitches have been resolved. The end result was positive for veterans applying for benefits, and the clarity on the screen was excellent on both ends. Special acknowledgment goes to the Hopi Tribal IT department for providing the technical expertise to upload the necessary software and obtaining the web camera to make this a successful project.

Currently, both HVS and ADVS are receiving one slot per day starting at 9:30 a.m. for the Hopi Tribe. Adding more slots will depend on the volume of future appointment requests. Additionally, HVS staff will be trained to facilitate the sessions, since they’re in a team effort to allow more opportunities for veterans to be seen. Our hope is to see an increased number of veterans apply for VA benefits to enhance their quality of life and health.

To schedule an ADVS web camera benefits appointment date or to be placed on a roster for upcoming appointments, please call (928) 734-3641 or 734-3462. Once you have a firm appointment date, please bring a copy of your DD 214 form (military discharge document), any award letters, social security card, bank information and/or death certificate (for survivor benefits). Please share this with veterans in your communities, villages and program clientele.

Hopi Tribal Council approves creation of a new Hopi Utility Corporation

Stan Birdell
Hopi Tutuveni

A Hopi Utility Corporation has been formed with the hopes of bringing clean water to First Mesa and Second Mesa since the folks living on those villages have too much arsenic in their water. The Hopi Tribal Council, in the interest of the Water and Energy team, unanimously formed the Hopi Utility Corporation for this reason on June 6.

“Va water is already on the Turquoise Trail to the villages, and there is a plan and design of the water delivery system. That’s the goal of the Hopi Tribe,” said Onsae.

Onsae said studies performed years ago showed it would cost about $18 million to build the waterlines to the villages. He said with inflation that those numbers will probably increase. He is hopeful that it will not cost much more than that. But the tribe doesn’t have that much money and those funds from the federal government, have yet to be approved. Onsae said the idea is to bring water from wells at the Turquoise Trail to the boundary of the two villages.

“Some of the veterans want to be the distributors,” he said.

Onsae said another goal was to accept this request from the community and to create a Hopi utility authority for the Hopi Reservation.

The planning committee for the 2017 Tuhisma art show has sent out applications for this year’s event to be held at the Totsvolki Conference Center at the Moencopi Legacy Inn, October 7-8, 2017. The event will showcase the best of Hopi artistry while providing artisans a venue to meet and sell to collectors and aficionados in a spacious, aesthetic setting. On Tuesday, October 3, the participating artists can bring their work to the Wellness Center Conference room beginning at 9 am for judging in various categories. A reception will be held from 5-7 pm on the same day.

Hopi cultural art enjoys a stellar reputation worldwide and many visitors to this annual event come from foreign lands. This attraction is remarkable but not surprising. People have appreciated and continued to elevate Hopi art in the marketplace for over 100 years. The word tuhisa can be translated to mean “skillful, ingenious, creative”. This recognition by Hopi people is an indication that we have always had exceptional artisans, from the time our ancestors first stepped on this land, and is evidenced by what they left behind. They used the material they had at hand to create the things they needed for daily life. Hopi people today continue to create these ancient arts to use in daily living as well as for ceremonies.

As with other indigenous communities around the world, modern culture and cultural appropriation influence change in use of materials and methods. Within this context, individual artists must adapt while discovering and pushing their own creative abilities. Tuhisma showcases traditional crafts and innovative expressions of these arts. Both styles reflect our culture today.

The Tuhisma art show is part of Pu’tavi Project, Inc., a non-profit entity. This yearly event is organized by volunteers for the benefit of resident Hopi artists. The planning committee raises funds through the sale of t-shirts, posters and booth fees. Monetary donations are accepted as well. There is always a need for volunteers, even a few hours, to help at the event or with fundraising. We meet on the second Wednesday of every month. All are welcome.

Applications can be picked up at Monongya Gallery and White Bear Hopi Arts.

Hopi Tribe Climate Adaptation Travel Support proposal selected for one-time project-based funding

Uberta Mowa, Hopi Water Resource Program

In a letter to the Hopi Tribe, the Bureau of Indian Affairs Tribal Climate Resilience Program informed the Tribe that they had finished the review and ranking of the FY16 proposal submitted by the Tribe.

“We are pleased to announce that your proposal for Hopi Tribe Climate Adaptation Travel Support for FY16 has been selected for one-time project-based funding for Category 3: Travel (Climate),” stated Helen Riggs, Deputy Bureau Director Trust Services.

“We estimate funding at $168,380. A 638 Awarding Official at the Western Regional Office will determine the actual award amount, based on your proposal and a determination of allowable cost. Actual award may differ from this estimate per deductible of the 638 Awarding Official (e.g., small, unlawful, unallowable, or non-responsive elements of the proposal).”

The Tribal Climate Resilience Program is intended to support tribes as they identify and address climate challenges. Hopi student Willem Martin participates in challenges during NASEP cohort ropes exercise

Early morning Tuesday, June 13th at Tucson, AZ, Navajo Nation (Navajo) and Willem Martin (Hopi) were challenged to work with their Native American Science & Engineering Program (NASEP) cohort during a ropes course exercise. The test, to fit all twenty-four student participants on a small 3x3 wooden crate as each new piece swings from the starting point to the crate from a rope. With their arms holding on and some extra effort for support, the group was able to achieve their object. This exercise perfectly enunciates the goals that NASEP aims to achieve. It allows students to gain hands on experience in problem solving, an important tool for those interested in Science Technology Engineering Mathematics (STEM) careers, create a strong network of indigenous scholars that can support one another through their academics; and provide students the self-efficacy to pursue their academic and career goals.

NASEP, organized through the Office of Early Academic Outreach at the University of Arizona, is a year-long program designed to provide Native American high school students with a vision of a STEM field; connects students with academic professionals and industry representatives; and creates the students’ ability to complete chemistry, physics, and pre-calculus before graduating high school. Using Dr. Shawn Secatero’s Well-Being model to guide the program agenda, NASEP programs help educate, but they also create new experiences and friends.” Please visit casa.grandes.jpg/casa.grandes." As volunteers, they had no incentive to solve the problem other than being loyal to their culture and heritage, something thatNeveah are hoping to spread to their peers. The seventeen volunteers, all 16-18, are part of the Hopi Tribe’s Ancestral Land Programs, which is managed by the Southwest Conservation Corps. They are spending their summer travelling to parks in the region that have some affiliation with their tribe. So far they have been to Paria or Glen Canyon in Northern Arizona and Joshua Tree in California. Their next stop is Glen Canyon in Page.

At every stop, they work with park rangers to complete tasks that are needed to preserve the cultural integrity of those lands. "We’re going to ancestral sites that are connected to us,” said crew member and Navajo Native American Science & Engineering Program participant, Elle Kooyahoema. "I don’t really know much about how we’re connected to the land, but it’s up to every generation to know about our ancestors and give us on the reservation. He has also consulted and served as an adviser to tribal organizations and federal agencies on tribal finance and economic development issues. Dr. Clarkson is a great supporter of Native students in higher education.
