Hopi Tribe National Bears Monument Proclamation

Office of the Chairman, The Hopi Tribe

Herman G. Honanie applauds President Obama's designation of the Bears Ears National Monument (BENM) under the Antiquities Act of 1906. This is a landmark decision culminating a broad collaborative effort between conservation groups, federal and state governments and five tribal groups including Hopi, Zuni, Ute Indian Tribe, Ute Mountain Ute and The Navajo Nation.

For the Hopi Tribe, the Bears Ears represents a "cultural landscape" that contains pristine wilderness areas; canyons, mesas, deserts, forests, springs, streams and rivers. These lands provide much needed refuge for the flora, fauna and birds found here. All of which are inextricably connected to the longevity of Hopi history and ancestors in this region. This history includes the earliest inhabitants, the Archaic and Ancestral Puebloan cultures.

These Hopi ancestors, the "Hisat'sinom" (People of Long Ago), imbued this landscape with their presence in the hundreds of thousands of archaeological sites located within the new monument. These

Kykotsmovi, Ariz. - To- sites represent the "Footday Hopi Tribal Chairman prints of Hopi Ancestors" and include ancient villages, migration routes, artifacts, petroglyphs and the physical remains of buried ancestors. All of which are remembered and maintained through oral tradition, pilgrimage, songs and prayer. From the beginning, the Hopi Tribe has supported this endeavor through formal tribal resolution and consultation, sharing of traditional knowledge and educating decision-makers about the Hopi connection to this culturally important area. The President's designation is a direct response to the Hopi Tribe's desire to have this landscape protected and preserved for future generations of all to enjoy and learn from.

The Hopi Tribe is pleased to see that the President's Proclamation calls for direct tribal involvement with the long-term management of the monument. "The concept that Tribes will finally be afforded actual, substantive decision making authority versus mere consultation is unprecedented, We hope the Federal Government looks to this innovative model in the future when consider-

as they relate to other First Nations." said Chairman Honanie. This co-management will ensure that Hopi concerns, traditional knowledge and use of the area is maintained and respected. The Hopi Tribe is dedicated to ensure that there will be a continuation of the unprecedented collaborative efforts that lead to this positive step in public lands conservation.

The Hopi Tribe commends President Obama for setting a high standard of public lands policy, one that places priority on the preservation of wilderness, as well as priority of the values of groups who hold these lands with reverence. The Hopi Tribe moves forward with dedication and willingness to work with our tribal neighbors, conservation groups and federal and state agencies in the establishment of the Bears Ears National Monument.

Through these continued efforts, the Hopi Tribe hopes to ensure that future generations of Hopi people have their own cultural ground to stand upon; providing them the opportunity to interact with their ancestral past of the Bears Ears as we have done since time immemorial.

NEW YEAR MESSAGE TO THE HOPI PEOPLE

A HOPI ELDER SPEAKS

You have been telling the people that this is the Eleventh Hour. Now you must go back and tell the people that this IS the Hour. And there are things to be considered...

Where are you living? What are you doing? What are your relationships? Are you in a right relationship? Where is your water? Know your Garden It is time to speak your truth

Create your Community Be good to each other

And do not look outside yourself for the leader

Then he clasped his hands together, smiled, and said: This could be a good time. There is a river flowing now very fast. It is so great and swift that there are those who will be afraid. They will feel they are being torn apart and will suffer greatly.

Know the river has its destination. The elders say we must let go of the shore, push off into the middle of the river, keep our eyes open and our heads above the water. And I say, see who is in there with you and celebrate. At this time in history, we are to take nothing personally. Least of all ourselves. For the moment that we do, our spirituallity growth and journey comes to a halt.

Traditional toys and caring adult interactions are best for young children's learning

moting learning for children 5 and younger, basic toys and quality time with adults are the best gifts an infant, toddler or preschooler can receive. This time of year parents are often asking, what about all those flashy, electronic toys with lights and sounds that we see advertised so much this season? First Things First has compiled some suggested toys by age and stage that promote learning and language development. And you might be surprised that at the top of list for every age is books.

In this press release, Northern Arizona University's Anna Sosa shares some excellent ways that parents can give the gift of quality time and the joy of reading to support their child's growth and development.

Please feel free to contact me with any questions about ways that First Things First is partnering with families to better prepare children for school and life. When it comes to pro-

> Anna Sosa, director of the NAU Child Speech and Language Lab in Flagstaff, set out to see which everyday activities promote the best environment for babies and toddlers to learn language.

> Early language development is critical to a child's learning. And babies, toddlers and preschoolers need to hear a lot of language in order to best learn how to speak and eventually transfer those skills into reading and writing.

> Turns out, parents and family members talk the most to babies when they are engaging their child with books and traditional toys, rather than electronic toys that claim to promote language development.

> "Young children learn through play, through experimenting with the world around them and through interaction with other kids and adults," said Ginger Sandweg, First Things First Senior Director for Early Learning.

> Sosa's study confirmed that. The study, published earlier this year in the Journal of American Medical Association (JAMA) Pediatrics, showed that parents used fewer words and interacted less with the child when they were playing with an electronic toy, which was designed > to draw out answers such or colors. Books and traditional toys, which centered on the same themes of animals, shapes and colors promoted the most language.

"Parents talked the most to their child when they were looking at books or playing with traditional toys, such as helping their child put together a farm animal puzzle," Sosa said. "Overall, the most ideal situation would be a parent spending 15 minutes undivided attention, sitting on the floor reading or playing with them, but even in that ideal situation, just having an electronic toy in the mix, impacts what the baby is hearing."

First Things First has compiled some suggested toys by age and stage that promote learning and language development.

Books are one of the best gifts for all ages. Daily reading has been shown to help young children develop language skills and increase vocabulary - both crucial if they are going to be good readers in the future. Other good choices for different age groups include:

Infants (under 1 year old) Babies are fascinated by

- their surroundings, especially faces and bright colors. Toys that stimulate that initial curiosity include:
- board books • safe, chewable toys • toys with mirrors

Toddlers (1-3 years old) -Toys that encourage imagination and problem-solv-

• pretend versions of everyday objects

ing include:

- toys to ride on or climb on • balls to roll or catch
- building-type toys, including fill and dump varieties.
- matching and sorting tovs
- · large crayons or markers with plain paper
- simple puzzles

Preschoolers (3-5 years old) - Toys that help preschoolers relate to each other and the world around them include:

- dress-up clothes kid-size furniture
- simple board games
- counting and letter games • sports equipment suit-
- able to their size musical instruments
- art supplies such as play

dough, safety scissors, glue, etc. ### About First Things First

Statement by the President on the Designation of Bears Ears National Monument and Gold Butte National Monument

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

Washington, DC-- Today, I am designating two new national monuments in the desert landscapes of southeastern Utah and southern Nevada to protect some of our country's most important cultural treasures, including abundant rock art, archeological sites, and lands considered sacred by Native American tribes. Today's actions will help protect this cultural legacy and will ensure that future generations are able to enjoy and appreciate these scenic and historic landscapes. Importantly, today I have also established a Bears Ears Commission to ensure that tribal expertise and traditional knowledge help inform the management of the Bears Ears National Monument and help us to best care for its remarkable national treasures.

Following years of public input and various proposals to protect both of these areas, including legislation and a proposal from tribal governments in and around Utah, these monuments will protect places that a wide range of stakeholders all agree are worthy of protection. We also have worked to ensure that tribes and local communities can continue to access and benefit from these lands for generations to come. Bears Ears National Monument

Encompassing roughly 1.35 million acres of Federal land, the Bears Ears National Monument will protect some of the country's most significant natural, cultural and archaeological resources, including important ancestral grounds for numerous tribes, as well as incredible landscapes that support hiking, hunting, rock climbing and other world-class outdoor recreation opportunities. The area gets its name from the iconic Bears Ears Buttes, two distinctive geological formations in the center of lands that are considered sacred by tribes in the region. Based on ancestral ties to the landscape, five tribal governments came together in a historic coalition to urge protections for the broader area, which also includes ancient cliff dwellings, ceremonial sites, abundant rock art, and countless other artifacts that hold cultural significance.

In addition to protecting this sacred landscape and the region's wildlife habitat and natural resources, today's action establishes a Bears Ears Commission to ensure that management decisions reflect tribal expertise as well as traditional and historical knowledge. In recognition of the importance of tribal participation to the care and management of the monument, the Departments of Interior and Agriculture will engage with the Commission, which will help to inform management decisions by sharing traditional knowledge and providing recommendations.

There have been over 80 years of various efforts to protect the Bears Ears region, beginning with former Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes in 1936 and by Members of Congress, state, local and tribal leaders, and conservation groups in recent decades. Most recently the Hopi Nation, Navajo Nation, Ute Mountain Ute Tribe, Ute Indian Tribe of the Uintah Ouray, and Zuni Tribe developed a proposal to protect the area, and U.S. Representatives Rob Bishop and Jason Chaffetz introduced the Public Lands Initiative, legislation that included a similar protection proposal for the Bears Ears landscape. Today's action responds to both of these recent proposals, recognizing the areas where there is broad agreement about the need for protections, tribal engagement, and allowances for historical uses such as grazing. Today's action also establishes a process for developing a management plan that will ensure robust opportunities for all interested stakeholders to provide input about how the monument should be managed.

Four Years Later, Tester Examines Impact of the Land Buy-Back Program

Vice-Chairman Questions DOI official, Tribal Leaders, and Trustees on the Success of Historic Land Consolidation Endeavor

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE U.S. Senate

(U.S. Senate)—Four years after the launch of the historic Land Buy-Back Program for Tribal Nations, Senator Jon Tester heard from tribal leaders who were impacted by the $1.9 billion initiative to restore fractionated land into tribal control.

During a Senate Indian Affairs Committee hearing, Tester heard testimony and questioned the Interior Department's Deputy Secretary, as well as Montana Tribal Leaders Fort Peck Chairman Floyd Azure and Blackfeet Vice-Chairman Terry Tatsey on the impacts they have seen with the land buy-back program.

"Addressing the problems of land fractionation is an important step for Indian Country," Tester said in the hearing. "By returning these lands to tribes, the Land Buy-Back program has helped tribal governments in a number of ways from addressing jurisdictional issues and protecting cultural and natural resources to developing key infrastructure."

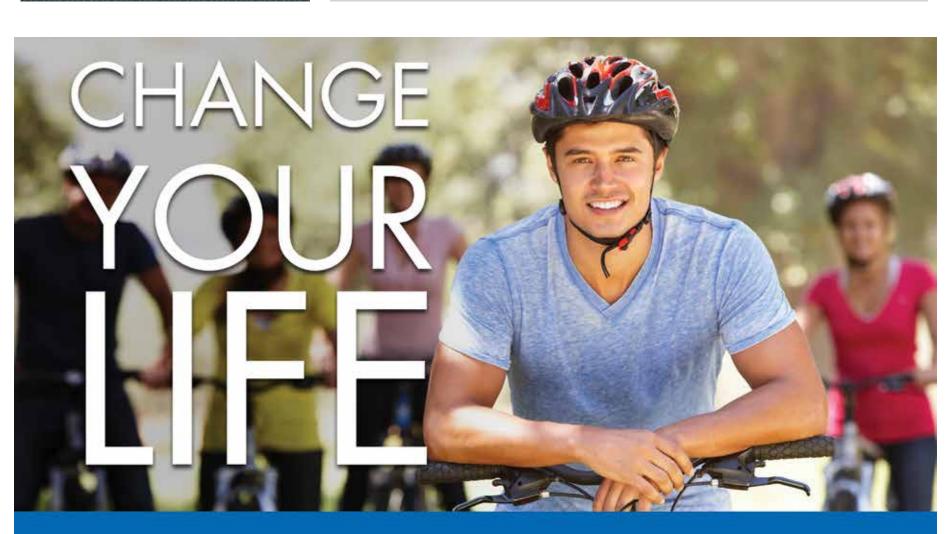

The Land Buy-Back Program for Tribal Nations was the result of a settlement from a class-action lawsuit brought to federal court by Elouise Cobell, a Montanan, an enrolled member of the Blackfeet Tribe, and recent Presidential Medal of Freedom recipient.

The land buy-back program aims to purchase fractional interests in trust or restricted land from willing sellers at a fair market value, which has provided tribal governments greater control of their land.

Since the land buy-back program began making offers to tribal members in 2013, nearly $900 million has been paid to land owners for roughly 1.7 million acres that has been restored to tribal governments.

This month, the Interior Department sent out over $270 million in offers to Blackfeet tribal members who own fractionated land interests on the Blackfeet Reservation. Tribal members from the Crow, Northern Chevenne, Flathead, Fort Belknap, and Fort Peck Reservations have already received payouts from the land buy-back program. ###
